On 25 November, 2015 Polarion Software entered into a definitive agreement to be acquired by Siemens. This transaction is expected to close in January of 2016.

The combination of Polarion Software and Siemens will bring expanded resources, technologies and expertise to you, in order to deliver more value, benefits, and capabilities for you and your business. Our shared vision of the future will allow us to scale a holistic development approach and fully realize the benefits of your digitization strategy.

As a result of this acquisition, Polarion customers and partners will now have access to an extraordinary portfolio of Siemens product lifecycle management (PLM) products integrated with Polarion's application lifecycle management (ALM) solutions. Moving forward, you can expect the combination of Polarion and Siemens to increase market opportunities for your business through expanded tools, programs and services.

Your relationship with Polarion will not change. The Polarion products, innovation, customer service and team you have relied on in the past will be there for you - before, during and after we unite with Siemens. You can continue to rely on your existing Polarion account relationships and support structure.

Shortly after the transaction closes in January 2016, I look forward to describing to you more about the fantastic benefits you can expect from Polarion and Siemens. If you have any questions, feel free to reach out to your Polarion contact or to me directly.
